Proceedings of Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—It was ordered, that to-morrow being Good Friday, to-day's adjournment shall be till Saturday.

Blair, at his own request, was excused from further service on the Committee on Public Lands, and Pettigrew was appointed in his place.

The Blair educational bill to regulate the compensation of laborers employed by the Government, fixing the lowest wages at $2 per day, was referred.

The Vice-President announced that he expected to be absent several days next week, when Ingalls was chosen President pro tem, and took the oath of office and assumed the duties of that position.

The Montana contested election case was taken up as unfinished business and Gray resumed his argument in support of the Democratic claimants.

The House Committee on Judiciary has appointed a sub-committee to visit Alabama and neighboring Southern States and make an investigation of the alleged improper action of court officers instituting prosecutions without reason, for the purpose of collecting fees; also, the charges that sentences in criminal cases have been suspended without warrant of law.

A petition from the New England Shoe and Leather Association against the imposition of a duty upon hides and skins was ordered printed in the record. The reading of the petition was received with applause by the Democrats.

The Senate bill was passed to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to gather full and authentic information as to the present condition and preservation of the fur seal interests of the government in the region of Alaska, as compared with its condition in 1870; also full information as to the impending extinction of the seal industry.

A Senate concurrent resolution was agreed to requesting the President to invite, from time to time, negotiations with any Government with which the United States may have diplomatic relations, to the end that any differences or disputes arising between the Governments, which cannot be adjusted by a diplomatic agency, may be referred to arbitration.

A resolution was adopted calling on the President for copies of the correspondence between the United States and Mexico relating to the seizure at Tampico of the schooner Rebecca in 1884.

A bill was passed authorizing the Secretary of War to deliver to the State of Colorado the flags carried by the Colorado regiments.

A bill was passed amending the articles of war so as to provide that, where punishment or conviction of a military offense is left with a Court-martial, the punishment in time of peace shall not be in excess of the limit prescribed by the President.

The Senate bill was passed amending the articles of war so as to provide that no person shall be tried or punished by Court-martial for desertion in time of peace committed more than two years before the arraignment, unless such person shall in the meantime have absented himself from the United States.

The House then resumed the consideration of the Idaho admission bill. Perkins of Kansas, spoke in advocacy of the measure. He emphasized the assertion that the only objection made to the bill was by those who think the Mormons in Idaho are disfranchised. He knew some Mormons who were good men, but the organization of the Mormon Church is pernicious. Mansur of Missouri, inquired why the gentleman had not voted to disfranchise the Mormons of Wyoming. Perkins replied that the question had not been presented to the committee, and, as far as he knew, there were no polygamists in Wyoming, but if there were they would be disfranchised under the Edmunds' act. He believed in the disfranchising of the Mormons on account of their practices and teachings of their church. It was for the House to say whether it would crown with its approval the criminal organization known as the Latter Day Saints, and whether it would tell the intelligent, patriotic people of Idaho they would be denied admission until they took into fellowship the men guilty of bigamy and polygamy.

Buckalew of Pennsylvania opposed the Idaho constitution because it outlawed the members of a certain church. Oates of Alabama criticised the compulsory education feature of the constitution. McAbbe of New Jersey, while denouncing the practice of polygamy, thought the constitution invaded the domain of religious belief. Springer of Illinois said the majority of the Committee on Territories framed the Idaho bill in such a way as to secure a partisan legislation instead of proper legislation to bring a State into the Union.

Stewart of Vermont spoke in support of the bill, and denounced the practices of the Mormon Church. He said the Constitution of Idaho was in line with the Edmunds bill.

Joseph of New Mexico presented the claims of that Territory for admission, on the ground that in population, resources, natural advantages, devotion to the American citizenship, New Mexico was as much entitled to Statehood as the great States recently admitted and as the Territories which it was now proposed to admit.

The Idaho admission bill passed the House—yeas 129, nays 1, the Democrats refusing to vote and the Speaker counting a quorum.

The Committee on Pacific Railroads heard further statements by Moorefield Story, attorney for the Union Pacific, supplemental to President Adams' statement, and included figures which he promised to file with the committee. Story submitted a copy of the pending bill to fund the Government indebtedness of the Pacific railroads, containing the amendments suggested by President Adams to meet the case of the Union Pacific. The changes of consequence proposed are the abolition of the Government guarantee on the bonds to be issued; provision for the cancellation of the mortgage upon full payment of the bonds, and the readjustment of the amounts of payments somewhat upon the plan proposed in the case of the Central Pacific.

The Missionaries Expelled.

NEW YORK, April 3.—Representatives of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, the American Board (Congregational), Episcopal Board, American Baptist Missionary Board, Missionary Society of the Methodist Church, American Bible Society, Evangelical Alliance and Society of Friends met yesterday in this city to consider the Chinese enumeration bill, now before the Senate, with special reference to its bearing upon missionary work and property in China. The sentiment of the meeting was strongly opposed to the bill. It was argued that its adoption would be a violation of treaty rights, and all present were apprehensive that it would endanger the personal safety of the American missionary residents in China and greatly hamper them in their work. It was decided to leave more specific action for the missionary societies separately. All the societies represent the mission in China.

Russian University Troubles.
By Cable and Associated Press.]
ST. PETERSBURG, April 3.—The Curator of the University attempted to calm the excitement among the students, but with no success. A detachment of police was therefore placed on permanent duty at the University. While arrests of the students at the Military Academy and the Academy of Medicine were being made bodies of Cossacks and gendarmes surrounded the buildings.

The movement has no connection with politics, but is chiefly the outcome of discontent arising from the reactionary and arbitrary spirit of the new University rules, which have taken the place of the more liberal regulations in force during the reign of Alexander II.

Freight Steamer Stranded.
By Associated Press.]
NEW YORK, April 3.—The British freight steamer, Connemara, went ashore this morning at Jones Islet, Long Island. The Connemara left here March 22d for London, and was evidently returning to port when stranded.

LATER.—The report that the steamer Connemara was ashore is incorrect. The vessel stranded is the French freight steamer Panama, from Bordeaux for New York.

Sir Francis says he regards Emin as a man absolutely devoid of gratitude and generosity.

Connecticut's Governor.
By Associated Press.]

Proposed Unrestricted Reciprocity.
By Associated Press.]

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Seriously Hurt.

The Tuscarora Times says: Will Graham met with quite a serious accident in the Grand Prize mine last Saturday afternoon. He was running a car at the 500-foot level, and noticing a rock in the top of the drift, which seemed likely to fall, he punched at it with a shovel, when it fell, striking him on the top of the right foot just below the instep. The foot was badly crushed and two of the bones broken. In addition, the tendon of the big toe was severed, which may necessitate the amputation of that member. His medical attendants think that, under the most favorable circumstances, it will be eight or nine weeks before the patient will be able to bear any weight upon the injured foot.

AT HIS OWN WAKE.

Sailor Mike Costlow surprises the Mourner at his Home.

"A funny thing happened some years ago," said a fisherman to a Boston Globe reporter, "and if you have time to listen I'll spin a yarn which you can put down for gospel truth.

"It was the second year after the schooner Flying Eagle was built, and I was one of her crew. That was in the latter part of the 60's. At that time all the boats that supplied the Boston market with fresh fish made their catch on the shore, as we termed it, that is, near the land.

"As I said, I was one of the Eagle's crew, and one day we were fishing on the northeast part of the Middle bank and one of our dories, containing Mike Costlow and John Rafford, missed the vessel during the heavy snow-storm that set in while we were hauling trawls.

"After searching for them all the afternoon we gave it up.

"Costlow belonged to this port, and the women folks kicked up a terrible time when they heard the bad news, and the only consolation we could offer was that they might be picked up by a passing vessel.

"Well, for three weeks the neighbors and relatives waited anxiously for the sea to give up its dead or their friends' return, and as neither was the result of their wait they decided to have a first-class wake. Costlow's folks lived on Battery street, and his best suit of clothes was taken down from the peg in the closet and stuffed with hay.

"After all was ready the neighbors came in to view the dummy that was stretched on the table and bewail his loss.

"After the farce had been carried on for some time a heavy step was heard on the stairs and then a stambling.

"Well, said I, 'pon my word, who ever he is he's in luck, 'cause he's stumbling upstairs.'

"The crying went on for some time, then all of a sudden there was a loud knock at the door.

"Arrah! Who can this be that comes knocking at a wake-house door? cried an old lady, but before she could receive an answer in walked Costlow as large as life.

"What's this? said Costlow. 'Is it me or my step-husband? and fetching a kick at the dummy he destroyed the whole outfit in short notice.

"Give us a cup of tea,' said he, and none of this fooling. It's no way to welcome a man home after being away three weeks on board a vessel where there was nothing to eat but the masts.

"After awhile one person said: 'It is Mike, I believe.'

"Of course it is, said he, and if I thought I would look any thing like that stuffed corpse in the corner the devil a life I'd ever want to die on this earth.'

"He then explained that he and his chum were picked up by a German bark and during the heavy northwest gale that came the next day they were driven to sea and their sails blown away.

"After repairs were made they again headed toward Boston, but were again blown off the coast; then they were favored by fair winds and arrived in port in a dispirited condition.

"After he landed he made his way to the house, and, seeing crape on the door, asked some people who was dead; and being informed that it was himself, proposed to quietly put in an appearance.

"You know the rest. But I am sorry to say that poor Mike was lost on Georges a few years ago, when the schooner Paul Revere went down with all hands during a heavy winter gale."

JEFFERSON'S GRANDCHILD

Living in Humble Circumstances and Resolved to Pension.

In Georgetown, D. C., in a humble cottage which rents for twenty dollars a month, lives the only surviving grandchild of Thomas Jefferson, says the New York Sun. Her name is Mrs. Septimia Randolph Meikleham, widow of David S. Meikleham, long since dead. She is in her seventy-sixth year, a cultured, amiable, venerable old lady, with two daughters and one son in her household. A luxuriant growth of curly, silvery-white hair surrounds her face, which bears a striking resemblance to that of her illustrious grandfather. Her descent from him is direct and clear. Born January 3, 1814, under her grandfather's roof at Monticello, Va., she is the daughter of Jefferson's favorite child and housekeeper, Martha, who married Thomas Mann Randolph, Jr., afterward Governor of Virginia, by whom she bore twelve children, all of whom are dead except the eleventh child and seventh daughter, the present Mrs. Meikleham, the only living representative of Jefferson of two removes since her sister, Virginia Jefferson Randolph Trist, died in 1882. Mrs. Meikleham is infirm by reason of advanced age. Her son, a man of artistic temperament, now in middle life, earns scarcely enough for self-support. Of her two daughters, both of whom are middle-aged, the younger, Miss Esther A. Meikleham, born while her parents were sojourning in Scotland, is employed in the Patent Office as a clerk at a salary of $1,000 a year, while the other has charge of the housekeeping. Repeated attempts by influential legislators to secure for Mrs. Meikleham a moderate pension have resulted only in failure. In the Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth Congresses Representative W. E. Robinson, of New York, introduced a bill to pay her $5,000 a year, subsequently amended to $3,500. Congress, however, refused to pass the measure on the ground that its enactment would set a dangerous precedent for other claims less meritorious for civil pensions.

A MOONSHINER'S REVENGE.

Plot for a Sensational Novel from the Georgia Court Records.

A few years ago among the moonshiners in the Fulton County prison was Walter Blackman, says the Atlanta Journal. On the night of December 13 Blackman and Miss Lulu Hicks were to be married. The guests had all arrived, among whom was a young man named George Blakesley, who had been a suitor for Miss Hicks' hand. Blakesley was a mountaineer himself, or had been, but had lately traveled about considerably. The justice was preparing his papers and the bride and groom made their appearance from an adjoining room.

A DIPLOMATIC DRAMA.

How Count Skouvaloff Laid a Trap for an English Foreign Secretary.

Washington letter in the Baltimore American: Speaking about the Russian treaty and the principles involved in the treaty, I am reminded of a good story which was recently told me by a native connected with the Russian legation. It illustrates the remarkable detective qualities of the officers of the Russian army and navy, and shows how an important movement in war strategy was made by the use of detective ability on a social occasion.

In 1876, during the Russian-Turkish war, the sympathies of the English Government were on the part of the enemies of Russia. At that time there were in England two rival chiefs—namely: The famous Disraeli (Lord Beaconsfield) and the Grand Old Man, Mr. Gladstone. The former was in power, and the latter striving to oust him out of power. Lord Beaconsfield sounded the key-note throughout Great Britain that through the successes of the Russian arms in the Balkans the British interests were in danger, while on the other hand the Grand Old Man made speeches that "the Turks must go, bag and baggage, out of Europe."

Each and every success of the Russian arms in Turkey so alarmed the Tory Government that it was resolved at last in a Cabinet meeting to aid the Turkish Government in arresting the victorious Russians from marching on Constantinople, and negotiations were opened with the Turkish Government for that purpose. This came to the ears of the famous Count Skouvaloff, the then Russian Ambassador to the Court of St. James, who was determined, in order to find out more fully of the nefarious designs of England on Russia, to give a quiet dinner party in honor of the English Foreign Secretary, Lord Salisbury.

Invitations were accordingly sent out, and Lord Salisbury accepted the same. Here followed the strange story. Count Skouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador, set out a table at that dinner party in a superb manner, the plates and other accessories of the costliest value. Lord Salisbury, being the guest of honor, sat at the right of the Russian Ambassador. During the repast the Secretary, who is well known as a kleptomaniac, helped himself to the costliest spoons, salt-cellars, etc. This was observed by the steward, who, with amazement, informed the Russian Ambassador. He said that the Foreign Minister, his guest, had stolen some of the best ware from the table.

"Hold on!" said Count Skouvaloff. "Don't say anything. Keep quiet, for we have bagged the enemy."

The dinner was over finally, and the party retired to an adjoining room for the purpose of smoking. Count Skouvaloff inquired of Lord Salisbury of the report that the English Government was going to send a fleet to the Bosphorus for the purpose of arresting the forward movements of the Russian army in the Balkans and aiding the Turk. Naturally, the English Foreign Secretary had little to say on the subject.

On the departure of Lord Salisbury the Russian Ambassador escorted him to his carriage. While opening the door of the carriage the Russian Ambassador was approached by the steward, who whispered something into the former's ear. The Ambassador immediately turned around to Lord Salisbury and said: "My Lord, something dreadful has happened, so the steward informs me, and your Lordship's attention will be called for a few minutes to the ante-room."

Lord Salisbury acquiesced, and upon his arrival there was confronted by the steward and charged directly with the theft of small gold spoons and salt-cellars studded with diamonds.

"What!" exclaimed Lord Salisbury to the steward; "how dare you insinuate this against my person?"

In reply the steward said: "I have seen you put the gold spoons in your trousers pocket, and the salt-cellars in your dress-coat pocket. I am responsible for those costly plates; hence I watched you closely. Please hand them out of your pocket."

"Villain!" exclaimed Lord Salisbury; "search me and your falsehood will be branded, and for that insult you will pay dearly."

"I dare not," replied the steward, "put my hands on your Excellency's person; but, pray, do it yourself."

"I will," said Lord Salisbury, and, putting his hands into his pockets, so unconscious was he of his kleptomaniac propensities that he drew forth the gold spoons and salt-cellars. In a complacent manner he handed them to the steward as if nothing had happened.

"Hold!" said Count Skouvaloff; "it proves to me that your Excellency is a host and hospitably as a host and committed a gross outrage on society, as well as against my person. I have to send for the police and have your Lordship arrested."

"No," replied Lord Salisbury, "do not disgrace me and my official position."

"Well," said the Count, calculatingly, "it can only be done if your Lordship will promise in the honor of a Minister to her Majesty the Queen that you, as a Foreign Minister who has the greatest voice in the Cabinet, will oppose the sending of the English fleet to the Bosphorus in order to hamper Russia."

To this Lord Salisbury assented; and, true to his promise, he opposed the proposition of sending the fleet to the Bosphorus, at least on that account, he had to resign his office, and Lord Salisbury, the present Premier of England, was put in his place.

PATIENT DRESS-MAKERS.

In the Course of Their Business They Meet Queen Victoria's Cranks.

"Yes, we meet many cranks," remarked a dress-maker to a Detroit Tribune reporter. "The first grade are those ladies who have dresses altered. I had some experience with one of this class long ago. She sent for me. 'Miss X—,' she said, 'I want this dress made over. The material is very expensive and cost me four dollars a yard. I am almost afraid to let you undertake it. 'Very well, then,' I said, rising. 'However, I think I will trust you,' she continued.

"So after the usual preliminaries of measuring and fitting I set down to make the dress to pieces. I applied the scissors and cut the goods on the bias. With that she groaned aloud. I worked for about half an hour while she continued to get more and more nervous. At last she arose. 'I can't stand it any longer,' she said. 'I am too nervous. You must go. I can't have you work any more to-day.' So I left.

"The next day I received a note to call. 'I suppose you might as well finish what you have begun,' she said when I entered, 'but work as quickly as you can.'

"Well, I was never before so harassed. She groaned whenever I touched the scissors. The dress turned out a perfect success and fitted her splendidly. As a result the lady has taken a great fancy to me and I like her, although social gaieties have made her a partial victim to nervous prostration.

"I recall another case," continued the dress-maker. "I made a dress for a lady out of decidedly cheap material. When she tried it on she said: 'It is too long.' I took it up an inch. The next day she said: 'It is too short.' I let it down the inch. She said: 'Dear, you have made it too long once more.' I took it up half an inch. Then it was too short once more. Seven times I let up and took out that half inch. At last she said: 'That is right.' It was right, because it was just as I had it at first. Yes, a dress maker needs patience."

SCENT IN HORSES.

Fine and Deep Emotions Dependent on the Sense of Smell.

The finest and deepest emotions of a dog seem to be dependent on his sense of smell. Not only does he carry on his business of hunting or guarding through its aid, but his devotion to his master and his recognition of lesser friends depend largely upon his nose. According to Horace and Stabile, another among the humbler friends of man is keen and delicate of scent.

This horse will leave masterly hay untouched in his bin, no matter how hungry he may be. However great his thirst, he will not drink of water objectionable to his questioning sniffs, nor from a bucket made in the least degree offensive.

His intelligent nostril will widen, quiver and query over the daintiest bit offered by the fairest of hands. A mare is never satisfied, either by sight or whinny, that a colt is really her own until she has certified the fact by means of her nose.

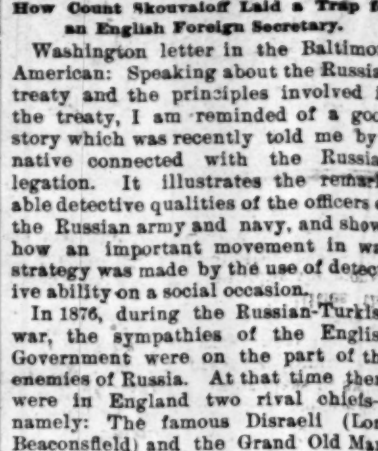

Blind horses will, as a rule, gallop wildly about a pasture without striking the surrounding fence. The sense of smell informs them of its proximity. Others, when let out from their stables, will go directly to the gate leading to their accustomed feeding-ground, and when desirous of returning, after hours of careless wandering, will distinguish that one outlet and patiently await its opening. The odor of that particular part of the fence serves as their guide.

Nervous and timorous as this noble animal is known to be, his fears are, of course, doubled by this keenness of scent, for not only does the eye inform him of danger, but the nostrils also herald its presence. The mere scent of a buffalo robe is sufficient to cause extreme terror in many horses, and some, scenting the smoke of a train which has long since passed, show all the fear evoked by its actual presence.

The Old Car and His Doctor.

An interesting story is told in the Pall Mall Gazette of the manner in which the celebrated Russian physician, Dr. Botkin, who has just died in the south of France, lost the intimate friendship of the late Czar, which he had possessed for many years. It appears that through a serious illness of the precious Emperor Dr. Botkin remained a day and night at the patient's bedside, and succeeded after a hard struggle with death in saving the then Czarowitch, Alexander II. He was deeply grateful, and asked the doctor to choose something with which he might recompense him. Dr. Botkin replied: "Your Majesty, I do not want any thing; but I beseech you to have mercy on Tchernichefsky (the Socialist author, who died a few weeks ago and who had been banished to Siberia). The Czar turned away without saying a word, but next day Dr. Botkin received the St. Vladimir order and 100,000 rubles, Tchernichefsky remaining where he was.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Quinn—So you think of locating here? Physician—Yes, I thought some of practicing among you.

Quinn—See here, young man, there's a good opening here for a man as understands his bit, but we don't want no practice or experimenting—doctoring's what we want!

Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous exhaustion or prostration, another with pain here or there, and in this way they all present, alike to themselves and their easy-going and indifferent or over-busy doctor, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and potions, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some womb disorder.

The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, encourages his "practice" until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse by reason of the delay. A proper medicine, like Dr. Pierce's Family Physician, directed to the cause would have removed the disease, dispelled all those distressing symptoms, and instituted comfort instead of prolonged misery.

It's the only medicine for the weakness, irregularities and painful derangements peculiar to women, sold by druggists under a positive guarantee that it will give satisfaction in every case, or price paid for it will be promptly refunded.

DR. PIERCE'S PELLETS regulate and cleanse the liver, stomach and bowels. One a dose. Sold by druggists 25 cents a vial.
